Weather Conditions Lower Registration for Special Course

Adherence to standards set up by the veterinary department of the University was urged by Dr. J. L. Wells, president of the Missouri Veterinary Association, at the opening of a special course for veterinarians this morning at 9 o'clock in the Veterinary Building.

At 9:30 o'clock about twenty had registered for the course. This is considerably under the number expected. Weather conditions will undoubtedly keep the attendance down, but a much larger registration was expected during the day.

"The University is interested in promoting the veterinary science," he said, "and its policy is to help schools; Clyde Akers, county super-intendent of St. Francais County; who may wish to apply to the de-and Prof. Pittman. There will also partment for advice."
